

Further Reading

Douglas, Anne. The Feminization of American Culture. London: Macmillan, 1996.

This seminal 1977 text describes in great detail the powerlessness and disenfranchisement of women propagated by the sentimentalist movement. The supplementary material included as appendixes is almost as invaluable for Victorian women's studies as the text itself.

“Pennsylvania in the Civil War.” Ed. Gayley, Alice J. <<http://www.pacw.roots.com/~pacw/index.html>>

Features detailed histories of Pennsylvania Union army regiments during the Civil War.

Lowry, Rhoda S. “Diary of Rhoda Stone Lowry: Fifth Book May 16, 1863.” Logan R.

Moorhead Collecton, MG 130, Box 1. Special Collections and Archives,

Stapleton Library, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Indiana, Pennsylvania

This is the original manuscript of the RSL diary. The diary measures 5.5x3.5”, closed. It has 52 leaves of lined notebook paper, bound by four strings. The cover is a brown faux leather cardboard. The photographic reproduction of the manuscript printed in this book is also available through the IUP Special Collections website, which will soon also include my transcription.

Moore, Henry. The Life of Mrs. Mary Fletcher: Consort and Relict of the Rev. John

Fletcher, Vicar of Madeley, Salop. 2006. The Wesley Center for Applied

Theology. 21 April 2006. <http://wesley.nnu.edu/john\_fletcher/index.htm>.

Moorhead, Logan R. Introduction. "L. R. Moorhead Family History: 38 Civil War Letters." 12 Sept. 2006.

<<http://libs0400.acadlib.iup.edu/depts/speccol/articles/letters.htm>>.

This is the introduction to the collection of letters by William and Robert Lowry on the IUP Special Collections website. Logan Moorhead is the great great grandson of Rhoda Stone Lowry, by way of her daughter Margaret. Moorhead's history of his family served as my primary source of biographical information about the Lowry family.

"The Battle of Gettysburg" AmericanCivilWar.com. 22 April 2006.

<<http://americancivilwar.com/getty.html>>

A brief but informative summary of the battle, with maps, used as background for this book.
